

Volunteers Needed to Serve on City Boards, Commissions and Committees

Overview. Boards and commissions are an established feature of municipal government which offers citizens an extraordinary opportunity to participate in a city's governmental affairs. Their activities have helped to shape or influence public policy in many areas. Thus, the City of Allen has boards, commissions, and committees that endeavor to reflect the varied interests of Allen's citizenry.

Several of the City's boards and commissions are required and established by state law, while others result from provisions of the City Charter or from local ordinances. They address such subjects as planning, zoning, transportation, parks, libraries, building, and arts. Although many boards and commissions are advisory, their influence and value can be significant. They make recommendations on a wide range of topics that come before the City Council. Several boards and commissions are quasi-judicial, which means the Council has delegated some portion of its legislative authority to a citizen board.

Code of Conduct. Members of the City's boards and commissions are considered to be "officers" of the City and, as such, are governed by several ordinances including the Code of Conduct Ordinance and financial disclosure provisions. Moreover, members of City boards and commissions are expected to conduct themselves in a manner to avoid both actual and potential conflicts between their private self-interest and the public trust.

How to Apply. For those citizens who are interested in serving on a board or commission, it is recommended that they attend at least one meeting of the board or commission they are interested in serving as a member. It is important to note that board or commission members who miss 3 consecutive meetings or 1/3 of the regularly scheduled meetings in a 12-month period of time, except for health reasons, will have their memberships automatically terminated. Most appointments are made for two years or to fill an unexpired term, unless otherwise indicated.

Application forms and a list of required qualifications for all boards, commissions, and committees can be viewed from the City's website. Please visit the City's homepage at www.cityoffallen.org and click on the link regarding Board and Commission Appointments. Information may also be obtained from the City Secretary's Office, City Hall, 305 Century Parkway.
